

Daylight: Nine Months of Not Writing a Bestseller

Z W Bates left her job in the corporate world to write a book, exploring places associated with the poet Louis MacNeice. In between being side-tracked by sparrows in her south London garden and Englands cricket team winning the Ashes, she writes about writing that first book, from the spring sunshine of Texas, past discovering nurslings of wit and a memorable staircase, through Icelandic rainbows and rain-washed Ireland. We travel with her across the north Atlantic on a containership and into the quieter waters of research libraries. Come behind the scenes, see the view from the keyboard and share her journey.
