

Indian Habitations in Sussex County New Jersey (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Indian Habitations in Sussex County New Jersey The archaeological investigations commenced in the summer of 1912 were continued during the field season of 1913. Inasmuch as the extreme northern part of the State had not been touched in the first seasons work, it was deemed advisable for Mr. Max Schrabisch to spend about four and a half months in a careful exploration of such part of Sussex County as he was able to cover in the time and with the means available. Mr. Leslie Spier spent a short time on investigations near Plain-field, along the creeks of Gloucester and Salem counties and in the drainage area of Maurice River. The results of this work was to add much to our knowledge of the character and distribution of Indian habitations in New Jersey. The discovery by Mr. Schrabisch of twenty-five rock houses in Sussex County and their careful excavation has shown a use by the Indians of these cave-like shelters, which until recently was not even suspected. The thanks of the Survey are due to all those who have so generously assisted in locating sites and furnishing information, and it is hoped that the results of these investigations as set forth in the following pages will prove of interest and value to those of our citizens who desire to know more of the habits and homes of the prehistoric possessors of New Jersey.
