

Coyolxauhqui Another Scientific Book for Indigenous Societies: A Parteras Perspective

This book is written using an Indigenous Perspective. The need to decolonize the myths of Coyolxauhqui arose while sitting in Cultural Anthropology courses at California State University, Los Angeles. During these courses the dehumanization and belittling of indigenous scientific knowledge by Eurocentric academia incited my indigenous roots and my Parteras perspective to decolonize the erroneous perception of indigenous accomplishments and the erroneous definition given to Coyolxauhqui. Linda Tuhiwai Smith encourages indigenous researchers to retell our retell our indigenous scientific accomplishments from a decolonized framework. Smith argues that a decolonized framework gives credit to the members of the community being researched. First, the purpose of the work is to argue that indigenous societies developed scientific methods and scientific based works just like Western science academia. Second, this work revises the image of Coyolxauhqui by correlating it to the solar system, to the female reproductive system, and the process of birth.
