This in Thibetan astronomy is the constellation of the Great Bear ruled by the goddess MarichT, the spouse of Haya-griva, the god of the horses hay a) neck (griva) or head, the ruling god of this eleven-months year, the sun-god born at its commencement. He is driven away by the Buddhist priests, as the most powerful of evil spirits, at the beginning of the sacramental service of three pills of flour, sugar and butter, partaken with beer, at the annual national festival, beginning their year in Miigh (January--February), which is thus the same as the Mossoo year. In Hindu astronomy he is represented as one of the stars of the Great Bear, and with his son Kashyapa, he is one of the tail stars in the constellation Simshumara, the alligator <sup>3</sup>. It is as a star, to which the Great Bear points, that Marichl is represented in Thibetan theology. Then she is the goddess called also Vajra Varahi, the sow (vdrakt) of the thunderbolt, who has three faces, the left being that of a sow, and sits upon a lotus throne, driving the seven pigs, the seven stars of the Great Bear <sup>4</sup>. She also appears
