

CM 101: Nature Study and Science, Habit Formation, and Mathematics (Charlotte Mason 101)

This is a topical study of three of the components (nature study and science, habit formation, and mathematics) of a Charlotte Mason education that come up again and again. Each topic has multiple linked reading assignments: some from Miss Mason's volumes, others from Parents Review (the magazine Miss Mason edited), and also a few good blog posts. Together, they offer a comprehensive view of how Miss Mason presented these topics throughout her works and some ideas about modern application. There are so many misunderstandings when it comes to Charlotte Mason's philosophy of education, and most of these stem from not reading her original works. This is a simple, organized way to read what Charlotte Mason wrote on the topics of nature study and science, habit formation, and mathematics. Future topics in the CM 101 series will be forthcoming. Please leave a positive review telling others how much this study guide has benefited you.
