

Meydum and Memphis (III) (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Meydum and Memphis (III)I. The work at Meydum this year was, in each direction, a carrying out of that which I had begun in 1891 ;and the purpose of this chapter is to link the present results with those of nineteen years ago, and also to give a current outline of the recent work, especially in relation to the plates of this volume. The order in which the different subjects will be noticed here is the same as that of the detailed descriptions by Mr. Mackay and Mr. Wainwright in the succeeding chapters; and it may be easier to follow the exact register of the work recorded by them, after grasping the outlines in a connected form. The date of the pyramid is that of King Sneferu at the close of the iiird dynasty, and the cemetery is mostly of the same age.No attempt is made here to repeat the information in my previous volume Medum, now out of print; the whole of that is needed for any study of the site, there is nothing to be altered or omitted from it, but I doubt if a second edition is desirable.The work this year was started by Mr. Mackay and Mr. Wainwright, at the beginning of December 1909, each taking separate parts of the site. Mr. Benton Fletcher joined us at Meydum, and very kindly helped us by drawing all the pottery and scarabs there. I went to Memphis early in February 1910, and Mr. Mackay followed in the middle of the month, Mr. Wainwright staying on at Meydum moving the sculptures and working on Nefermaat and the pyramid. At Memphis Mr. Bushe-Fox joined us and worked out the pottery kilns of Ptolemaic and Roman age, besides taking part in the clearance on the Ptah temple. The work was closed during the latter part of April. The spelling of the name of Meydum may be noted. In the previous publication I followed the custom of using a long e for the Arabic ye; but, seeing the importance of using a transliteration which shall indicate the Arabic spelling, I have since used y in all cases for ye, as in the words Sheykh and Bedawyn. Hence the more correct spelling is Meydum, and that form prevents mispronunciation of the name. The difference in the name will sufficiently indicate whether references are to the previous volume or the present.² A curious feature of The Pyramid of Sneferu, which was noted in the previous work, is the presence of a broad shallow groove on the faces of the two inner casings. These are shewn on the view pl. i, 2, by arrows at the sides of each groove, pointing down to the top casing, and upwards on the lower casing. These grooves are only visible on these casings and not on the coats outside of these, nor on the outer casing at the pyramid angle of 51° 52' which covered over all the steps finally. The hollow appears to be about two or three inches deep, and has been trigonometrically observed as 211 wide on the upper, and 195 on the lower face. In 1891 I proposed that these grooves were analogous to the grooves on the successive coats of brick mastabas, indicating where the false door and ka chamber lay behind them in the first body of the mastaba; hence these grooves might indicate that there was a ka chamber in the first body of Sneferus mastaba. This year we cleared away the great mound of chips and blocks from the eastern face of the pyramid, working in successive steps, from each of which the stuff was carried out sideways, as seen in pl. xiv, 3. In this way we bared the south side of the small temple, and the casing down to the base, pl. xiv, 2. Then a pit was sunk outside of the pyramid, and a tunnel cut under its foundation for 150 feet to the inner body of the mastaba. This passed through gravel laid under the pyramid-angle casings, and through solid rock all the way beneath the mastaba-angle casings. There was not time to expand the work this season, enough to shew whether a ka chamber exists. The full account of this work will therefore be given in future.
