

Peasant Life in the West of England (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Peasant Life in the West of England
The facsimile of an Autograph Letter, addressed by the late Lord Beaconsfield to the Author so recently as the 28th December, 1880, will, it is believed, lend an especial interest to the present Edition. This genial communication was received in reply to a letter from the Author, forwarded to his Lordship with a copy of Peasant Life In The West Of England, on the 24th of the same month of December. The letter of the distinguished statesman and litterateur will perhaps surprise some persons who may have failed to recognise, under the guise of the astute politician, the quiet lover of Trees and of sylvan scenery: and there are probably others who were unaware of Lord Beaconsfields especial interest in the welfare of the English Peasantry. Amongst these the author does not include himself - for he believes that, had the life of this eminent man and accomplished politician been spared for a short time longer, he would have accorded his warm support to the proposition to confer the political franchise upon the English agricultural labourer.
