Not illustrated. 1860 Excerpt: ... Davis for the purpose, was appointed the agent of the town to procure from the Legislature an act authorizing the Governor and Council to issue a new and corrected Charter of the Township of Montpelier. At the Freemens Meeting of this year Joseph Woodworth was chosen Representative, being the fourth individual chosen to that office in town. And the highest vote thrown for State officers was 71. At the March Meeting of 1804, Pearley Davis, for committee appointed to act as agents, in conjunction with those of Barre and Berlin, to provide for building a new bridge across the river at the Jacob Davis, Jr, farm, on the road to Barre, reported that they had contracted with Joseph Palmer to build said bridge and warrant it to stand two years, for the sum of $270,50--the part of which devolving on Montpelier to pay being $90,83, which, the work being completed, they had settled by a town note. This report was accepted. David Wing, Jr., who was appointed to procure the new Charter, also made his report, (which was accepted,) as follows: That he had found it necessary, in order to have the titles to lands in said town secure, to petition the Legislature for relief--who had passed an act authorizing the Governor to issue a new Charter of said town, which Charter he had procured and recorded. Having thus somewhat minutely given the municipal history of Montpelier during the first twelve years of its existence as an organized town, noted all that was new and peculiar in its public proceedings, and shown the action on which most of the town institutions of the present time were reared, we will now bring this long, to many perhaps dry, but necessary chapter to a close, to resume the specific subject, from
