

Social History of the Races of Mankind: Fourth Division; Dravido-Turanians, Turco-Tatar-Turanians, Ugrio-Turanians (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Social History of the Races of Mankind: Fourth Division; Dravido-Turanians, Turco-Tatar-Turanians, Ugrio-Turanians This volume contains the social history of European nations or nationalities who have attained a high degree of civilisation, and who, like the Hungarian Magyars and the Finns, either profess Roman Catholicism or Protestantism, or like the Osmanli or Turks are Mohamedans of the Soonite sect. The Dravido-Turanians of Hindostan who have adopted Hindoo customs and the Hindoo religion are measurably civilised; while the mountain tribes are still barbarians in customs, manners and religion. The Turco-Tatar Turanians, who almost all have been converted to the Mohamedan faith, are more or less civilised. On the other hand, Ugrio-Turanians, with the exception of the Finns, are either nominally Greek Catholics, or they still adhere to their ancestral superstitions of Shamanism; and as they are neither savages nor real barbarians they may be considered in a slight degree civilised. These nations, nationalities, and tribal communities thus illustrate the social character and the degree of civilisation reached by races that inhabit both the northern and southern part of Europe, as well as the southern part of Asia. This diversity of topographical peculiarities, of nationalities and tribal organisations, furnishes the most conclusive proof that the development of social life and human civilisation, for which language serves as vehicle of thought, has a uniform basis; they are the outgrowth of the inexorable necessity of mutual dependence and mutual co-operation, everywhere forced upon man by the same physical constitution, the same intellectual aptitudes, the same inclinations, the same passions, the same wants, the same desires and the same aspirations; only more or less modified, not in anything that is essential, but only in degree, by the surrounding circumstances, and the existing natural conditions. Society is not an artificial creation, which the modern socialists imagine they can change by a stroke of the pen or by acts of violence, or by the revolutionary subversion of the existing order of things. Their hollow theories are simply day-dreams that can never be realised. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
