

SPEC Kit 297: Library Development

Over the past twenty years, library development has become increasingly more specialized. Depending upon the institution, library development can include annual giving, major giving, deferred giving, corporation and foundation relations (of which grant writing may be a component), public (and/or external) relations, event management, and other services. This survey is designed to investigate the staffing, reporting relationships, and duties of library development programs in ARL member libraries. The results of this survey will provide a snapshot of library development programs in research libraries and provide a baseline for institutions as they work to create, refine, or advocate for library development programs in their institutions.
