

The Desert: Further Studies in Natural Appearances (Classic Reprint)

PREFACE-DEDICATION Co A. M. 0. After the making of Eden came a serpent, and after the gorgeous furnishing of the world, a human being. Why the existence of the destroyers ? What monstrous folly, think you, ever led Nature to create her one great enemy -man ! Before his coming security may have been; but how soon she learned the meaning of fear when this new EdipuB of her brood was brought forth ! And how instinctively she taught the fear of him to the rest of her children ! To-day, after centuries of association, every bird and beast and creeping thing-the wolf in the forest, the antelope on the plain, the wild fowl in the sedge-fly from his approach. They know his civilization means their destruction. Even the grizzly, secure in the chaparral of his mountain home, flinches as he crosses the white mans trail.
