

History Of Education

The theme of this book is the development of creativity as a basic concept in educational thought. Man's quest for education represents at the same time his search for creativity. To be creative implies a capacity for self-definition, the ability to discipline one's powers, the vision of new goals, and the application of this vision to daily existence. Creative education represents an affirmation of man; it symbolizes an unwavering faith in his intellectual and moral capacities, so that the gulf between the realm of ideals and actuality can be narrowed.
