

The Gentlemans Magazine Library, 1883: Being a Classified Collection of the Chief (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Gentlemans Magazine Library, 1883: Being a Classified Collection of the Chief The present volume (as its successors will be) is something more than a mere volume of selections. It aims at reproducing from the old Gentlemans Magazine all that is really of value on the subject of which it treats - manners and customs. This, perhaps, is hardly the place to expatiate on the value and interest of the world-known journal we are now dealing with; and it is, moreover, not at all necessary. Everybody knows the Gentlemans Magazine - knows it and values it. The idea of printing selections from it was first suggested by Gibbon, the historian, in a letter dated from Lausanne, Feb. 24, 1792, and printed in the January number of 1794, pp. 5, 6. The paragraph is as follows: I am tempted to embrace this opportunity of suggesting to you the ideas of a work which must be surely well received by the public, and would rather tend to benefit than to injure the proprietors of the Gentlemans Magazine. That voluminous series of more than threescore years now contains a great number of literary, historical, and miscellaneous articles of real value; they are at present buried in a heap of temporary rubbish; but if properly chosen and classed they might revive to great advantage in a new publication of moderate size. And again, in 1799 (Part ii., p. 754), a correspondent, V., suggests a similar undertaking. Dr. J. Walker, in 1809, first acted upon this hint, and issued four volumes, 8vo., of A Selection of Curious Articles from the Gentlemans Magazine.
