

The Pillars of Hercules, Vol. 2 of 2: Or a Narrative of Travels in Spain and Morocco in 1848 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from The Pillars of Hercules, Vol. 2 of 2: Or a Narrative of Travels in Spain and Morocco in 1848

The sheik deploring the result of the days hunt, I expressed the hope that we should make up for it next day; on this they were thrown into paroxysms, and they set about the sheik, some by fair means, the rest by foul, to prevent my doing anything save going along the main road, or going any road except that to Dar el Baida, whither I had no particular wish to go. Despite these difficulties, I found means to concert privately a chase for the next day. We were to be limited to twenty guns, and, with a good supply of beaters, to start early. In the morning, Sheik Tibi and the other soldiers, after using every effort to stop me, insisted on going also; thus, the sun was high before we got a start.
