Not illustrated. 1840 edition. Excerpt: ... the gentleman. Religion may not be minutely explained, but it is much that its spirit is attended to; and the pupil carries a reverence for it in the abstract, throughout life, even though, in the hurry of commercial pursuits, he may neglect its principles. Hence the middle classes, with us, have a greater veneration than others for religion; hence their disposition, often erroneous, to charity, in their situation of overseers and parochial officers; hence the desire (weak in the other classes) with them so strong, of keeping holy the Sabbath-day; hence their enthusiasm for diffusing religious knowledge among the negroes; hence their easy proselytism to the stricter creeds of Dissenting Sects. But if the spirit of religion is more maintained in their education, the science of morals, in its larger or abstruser principles, is equally neglected. Moral works, by which I mean the philosophy of morals, make no part of their general instruction: they are not taught, like the youth of Germany, to think--to reflect--so that goodness may sink, as it were, into their minds and pervade their actions, as well as command their vague respect. Hence they are often narrow and insulated in their moral views, and fall easily, in after life, into their great characteristic error, of considering Appearances as the substance of Virtues. ... The great experiment of the day for the promotion of Education among the middle classes, has been the foundation of the University and King's College. The first is intruded for fill religions, and therefore all religion is banished from it!--a main cause of the difficulties with which it has had to contend, and of the jealousy with which it has been regarded. Its real principle was
