

History of America Before Columbus, According to Documents and Approved Authors, Vol. 1 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from History of America Before Columbus, According to Documents and Approved Authors, Vol. 1 For several years I searched the Vatican Secret Archives to obtain reliable information regarding the history of one of the Roman pontiff, Alexander VI., who is as much slandered as he is little known. While garnering from the richest of historical treasuries the most important notes for my study, I happened, once in a great while, to meet with some original and unpublished record pertaining to the religious history of America, either of the time of the Spanish discovery or before it. No wonder if, an American, I considered those documents highly valuable, and copied them carefully. Little by little I had gathered a number of papers which some of my friends deemed to be worthy of publication. They attached especial importance to the records of papal intercourse with American territory previous to the discovery of Columbus. My compilation was necessarily of incoherent and, for most readers, of useless material; which, however, if employed to advantage, might serve as a foundation for some interesting historical work. I went, therefore, to search other libraries and ancient publications? to complete my notes and fill up the intervening gaps. The results were very gratifying; but, through a natural effect of inquiry, I was soon persuaded that more labor was needed; for what I learned of Christianity in America shortly before Columbus set me on the track of an evangelization earlier than that to which my first documents had reference.
