Not illustrated. 1916 Excerpt: ... This little damsel, tradition says, was my uncle Johns third flame; and he would infallibly have run away with her, could he have persuaded her into the measure; but at that time ladies were not quite so easily run away with as Columbine; and my uncle, failing in the point, took a lucky thought, and with great gallantry ran off with her picture, which he conveyed in triumph to Cockloft Hall, and hung up in his bed-chamber as a monument of his enterprising spirit. Thus, in merry mood, and sometimes grave, the Gouverneur family--changed but little, it is said, save in name--live through the pages of Salmagundi, where their names are indelibly written for generations to come. Of Newark itself Irving writes but little, though in later years he wrote, With Newark are associated in my mind many pleasant recollections of early days, and of social meetings at an old mansion on the banks of the Passaic. OLD DEACON SAMUEL ALLINGS MISTAKE WHEN HE FACED A COMPANY OF BRITISH There was an Alling in the Revolutionary War who was a lieutenant of the local militia and a grandson of the respected Deacon Samuel Alling of the First Church who came from New Haven about 1701. The young lieutenants name was John, and on a bitter winter day he espied a company of redcoats filing down the street toward the northwest corner of Broad and Market where the Alling place then stood, now occupied by a drug store. The temper of these soldiers was none of the best. There had been Patriot snipers all along the march, and their mettle was pretty well tried by the time they halted in front of the Alling house. The British are here, Abigail! Run to the cellar with the children! called

Lieutenant John to his wife. The old deacon, nearing the century ...
