

The Educational Thought of W.E.B. Du Bois: An Intellectual History

Well-documented and gracefully written, Alridge's important work fills one of the remaining gaps in our knowledge and understanding of the intellectual legacy of the leading African American scholar-activist of the twentieth century.--From the Foreword by V.P. Franklin, University of California, Riverside

This book offers a much-needed update to the enormous depth of DuBoiss educational philosophy. His educational vision was far beyond the debate with Booker T. Washington over curricular emphases. In this book, Alridge does a brilliant job in providing a broader and more balanced view of DuBoiss intellectual and educational thought.--Linda M. Perkins, Claremont Graduate University

With this superb book, Derrick Alridge has re-centered the axes of historical debate and analysis in the fields of African American educational and intellectual history. It is a welcome addition to the literature in the fields of Du Boisian Studies, American intellectual history, and African American educational history.--Larry L. Rowley, Assistant Professor, University of Michigan

This is the first published, comprehensive interpretation of Du Boiss educational thought. Historian Derrick P. Alridge moves beyond the overly discussed debates between Booker T. Washington and Du Bois to provide fresh insights into Du Boiss educational thinking. He draws on a plethora of published and unpublished primary sources to illuminate Du Boiss educational thought on a wide variety of issues, such as women and education, black leadership, black identity, civil rights, black higher education, community education, and academic achievement. This incisive examination of Du Bois:

- * Covers 70 years of Du Boiss life, from his graduation as the first black Ph.D. recipient at Harvard to his death in Ghana.
- * Traces relationships with Booker T. Washington and other African American thinkers of his time.* Shows how events, such as lynchings, Reconstruction policies, and Progressivism influenced Du Bois's life and thinking.
