

Foundations and Changing Practices in Extension

This book, supported by the Canadian Society of Extension, draws on a range of foundation disciplines to examine changes in the development and practice of extension education. The 17 chapters in the book were written by some of North America's leading figures in the social sciences and adult education. This book provides sound theory and practical guidance to anyone involved in extension, continuing or adult education, technology transfer, or community and rural development. It is suitable as a text for college and university level courses in these areas.
