

Waldenses: Protestant Valleys of Piedmont, Dauphiny; The Ban De La Roche (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Waldenses: Protestant Valleys of Piedmont, Dauphiny; The Ban De La Roche The Work here presented to the reader, is the fifth of an illustrated series of volumes, which, under the auspices of public favour, the Author has now happily brought to a close. The illustrations consist of seventy-two highly finished steel-plate engravings, from original drawings taken on the spot, as stated in the Introduction. The scenery of the Valleys of Piedmont and Dauphiny, is from the pencil of Mr. Bartlett. The route of Henri Arnaud across the Alps, was successfully explored by Mr. Brockedon in person, for the express object of illustrating that portion of the work which treats of the Expedition; and it is only necessary to add, that the pencils of Stanfield and Harding have also contributed to the undertaking. Thus supported, the Work has gone on prosperously, from its first commencement, eighteen months ago, and will very shortly be translated into the French and German languages. All, indeed, have admired its pictorial embellishments; many competent judges have commended its impartiality; and if any of our readers beyond the Alps have fancied that, on careful investigation, they detected a party-spirit pervading these sketches of the Protestant Waldenses, the imputation is so very unmerited, that it may be readily overlooked and forgiven. The Author of the present Work is no controversialist in matters of theology; and, had he been hardy enough to appear in so critical a position, he would undoubtedly have chosen some better vehicle for its display, than the pages of a work so exclusively devoted to the Picturesque. Wide and varied intercourse with society abroad; the personal friendship of enlightened Catholics at home; and a becoming deference and respect for all whose religious sentiments may differ from his own, have taught him to be uniformly guarded in his language, averse to the fostering of narrow-minded prejudices, and cautious of drawing hasty or harsh conclusions. If, therefore, he has offended any sensitive individual by quoting from long accredited historians - Catholic as well as Protestant - he can only regret that the truth should be of such a nature as to give offence to any one. For, if his views or statements be in strict accordance with the great standard authorities on this subject - as they certainly are - they must be true; because the truth of these authorities - though often impugned - has never been invalidated. With respect to the actual condition of the Waldenses, the Authors testimony is fully corroborated by all who, like himself, have visited them in their native Valleys. He has freely sympathized with them in their misfortunes, and expressed a hearty desire to see them invested with the rights and privileges of their fellow-subjects: he has deprecated, in their behalf, all religious persecution, all political intolerance; he has dwelt with admiration on their private virtues, their fervent piety, their exemplary lives, their patriotism, their loyalty, their patient endurance of many privations. But, if he has only done this, he has only done what every enlightened Catholic of the present day will thank him for having done; for there are, he is willing to believe, thousands professing that creed, who would rejoice to see the long persecuted Waldenses finally emancipated from the ban of religious distinction, and freely admitted, with themselves, to a full participation in all the rights and privileges of the State.
