

Moving on from Munro: Improving Childrens Services

Three years after the publication of the influential Munro Report in 2011, Moving on from Munro draws together a range of experts in the field of child protection to critically examine the effects that the Munro reforms have had on multi-agency child protections systems in the United Kingdom. Focusing on topics such as early intervention, vulnerable adolescents, and multi-agency responses to young people at risk, policy and practice specialists join academics in different areas of childrens services to consider what good services look like. They then consider the challenges that stand in the way of improving services and how to overcome them.
