

Legends and Traditions of Huntingdonshire (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Legends and Traditions of Huntingdonshire The object of the present volume is to furnish in a few short sketches some of the more interesting and curious incidents which relate to the County of Huntingdon. They are not encumbered by dry statistics, genealogical tables, registers of land sales, or other matters which may be of interest to the arch?ologist, but which have no attraction for the ordinary reader. The historic legends and incidents recorded will be found to command a wider interest than a more connected, but drier, narrative could possibly do. Thus the present volume will, in a small and concise form, supply a general review of the history of the County, in a manner suitable to popular tastes. Each Chapter, to a great extent, tells the story of an historic episode; or furnishes a group of such incidents. The work is issued with a full knowledge of its many shortcomings and failings.
