Excerpt from Vulgar Errors: Ancient and Modern, Attributed as Imports to the Proper Names of the Globe Investigating the Origin and Uses of Letters Biblical Long-Lost Names Unknown Names of Heathen Gods, of Nations, Provinces, Towns &C In General Vallanceys Irish Grammar, it is stated, that according to Neuman, Hebrew letters do each signify the idea either of motion, space, or matter. Hence every Hebrew word mull be at once a name, and a definition of the subject; and all objects, in the natural and moral world, must be known as soon as their flames are known, and their separate letters considered. The proper names of men being borrowed from such ideas as Adam, i.e. Red Earth, it is more rational to suppose our learned ancestors named their letters from men rather than trees. United with the features which nature presents, hills are the prominent objects, and from their heights, trees were sometimes allusively called by their names. Thus Ceide, which may be written Ced, is Celtic for an hill; and Ced-ar, or the great tree, took its name from this appellative. The word Ais, pronounced Aisb or Asb, is also head or hill; and this is an old Hebrew name for man, and a Britim name for a tree: But these, which prove that the features of nature gave names to men and to trees, prove not that either men or trees gave denominations. to these features, or to letters. On the contrary, I shall prove, that from the great natural objects of the earth, nearly every name was originally derived: And where a departure from such descent is imagined, it is generally to be attributed to fancy, and the mistake may be placed to our ignorance on this subject.
