Excerpt from London Scenes and London People: Anecdotes, Reminiscences, and Sketches of Places, Personages, Events, Customs, and Curiosities of London City, Past and Present This volume of London Scenes and London People is reprinted from the columns of the City Press newspaper. The habitual readers of that journal will not need to be informed of the circumstances under which the volume has been produced, or of the reason for its publication. But as it will fall into the hands of many readers who are not acquainted with those circumstances, a few words by way of preface seem to be required. The writer of these papers has found an agreeable recreation in contributing to the City Press his own personal recollections of scenes and events and characters illustrative of the past and present life of London City. These reminiscences have been occasionally varied with criticisms of ancient customs, descriptions of relics and memorabilia, and historical pictures touched with colours borrowed from incidents of the passing hour, as well as from memorials little known, and traditions all but forgotten.
