

Achieving, Believing, and Caring: Doing Whatever It Takes to Create Successful Schools

Achieving, Believing and Caring argues that learning does not stop and start at the schoolhouse door. This timely book challenges schools to redefine success to include students physical, emotional, social, and intellectual development and encourages them to meet students where they are so they can get past the limitations they encounter in school and the world beyond. Inspiring examples of schools, programs and teachers that make a difference in the lives of children, their families, and community complement this remarkable book.
