

Quaker Sarah and the Indian: Historical Fiction Pennsylvania, New Jersey

Sarah and her Quaker family settle into the Pennsylvania/New Jersey frontier in the 1700s. In the dark forests panthers and mountain lions still prowl. Others wander these hushed forests; the remnants of the former masters of these lands, the Lenape Indians. Relations sour as the Indians resent the settlers who built cabins that rest on the bones of their ancestors. Hostilities increase and the Quakers search for peace amidst the rising turmoil. Sarah's fiery spirit leads her to a mysterious meeting and an Indian who changes her staid life into adventure and romance. Based on real events at the dawn of the French Indian War, includes many eyewitness accounts such as Indian attack on Quaker meeting in Easton, Pennsylvania, when Indians on the warpath came to attack Quakers, but spared them. Explores Quaker and Lenape (Delaware) Indian philosophy and views of the world. Romance, adventure and education. Recipes of colonial cooking such as Hasty Pudding and Johnny Cakes included. Contains historical Glossary at end of book. Accounts of real events woven into romantic fiction. Entertaining way to study history. For youth, romantics and history buffs.
