

Principles of Life Technique

Based on the results of science I have asserted in my publications since 1978 that the human body is a result of natural evolution. Therefore, like every living organism, it selfishly seeks a safe and good life. Learning from Newton that the world is a system of forces, and from Hegel that all forces are subject to reciprocal effects, it was Parsons who could order the world according to the significance of every force in our life. Darwin discovered the self interest as the intrinsic motive force of our behaviour, dialectically completing Kant, who had proposed equal rights as the absolute moral law for all human behaviour. From the integration of these fundamental tenets of thought into one logical system emerges this philosophy of life.
