BRIDGING THE ACHIEVEMENT GAP:
What Successful Educators and Parents Do
Publication Date: January 18, 2012
Note: this book is printed in black and white. A color edition is available on Kindle Fire. Educators, policymakers and parents can take a journey with Sacramento, California educational reform advocate Rex Fortune to effect change. After presenting national and state data as evidence of the achievement gaps result on the countrys economy, taxpayers, prisons, and unemployment, Fortune asks the question, How can low-achieving minorities close the achievement gap? The answers are revealed in 514 pages of meticulous research, successful strategies, and on-site visits to 7 gap-closing, California K-12 public schools. Join Fortunes engaging and revealing conversations with: Administrators who are strong, dedicated leaders - focused on educating each student Teachers who know why their students are 100% proficient or advanced and share their practices Parents who prioritize learning, in school and at home, and are cheerleaders for their childrens progress Examples of data included in the book are: Detailed data on the 144 California public schools with high minority (African American and Hispanic) and high socioeconomically disadvantaged students chosen for the study Tables and reports on 20 gap-closing, high minority schools as well as tables on 20 low-achieving schools Tables and reports of similarities from 15 high-achieving Asian schools Over 400 images include: Photos taken at the school site visits Exhibits of school documents: parent contracts, teachers lesson plans, interview instruments Tables, graphs and charts supporting research on the API and CST, ethnicity, teachers credentials and salaries, school finances, class size, enrollment, textbooks and more BRIDGING THE ACHIEVEMENT

GAP powerfully illuminates the path for change with practical and proven practices, and is a valuable resource to the education profession. Special Offers: A new DVD for parents, PARENTING PRACTICES: How Successful Parents Bridge the Achievement Gap and other publications are available from the author. See Fortune and Associates website.
