Excerpt from Ten Years North of the Orange River: A Story of Everyday Life and Work Among the South African Tribes From 1859 to 1869 I offer this work to the public as a humble contribution to our literature on Southern Africa. The reader is first introduced to the rural and village life of the Cape Colony. Sketches of social and religious life in the Free State and Transvaal Republic are followed by a description of long-established mission stations. Several chapters are devoted to the Makololo Mission, which was inaugurated so auspiciously and ended so fatally. Narrating events as they took place, I have left their lessons to be drawn by others. My journey to Matebele-land enables me to describe the hideous form of society in a purely military tribe. Our residence at Shoshong, and the experiences of the Mission there, are given in the concluding chapters. The Appendix contains what may be read with advantage as an introduction to the present work. I would specially direct attention to that part of it which describes the results of the past contact of Europeans with South Africans. Every Christian believes in the spread and final triumph of Christianity. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
