Excerpt from The History, Topography and Antiquities (Natural and Ecclesiastical): With Biographical Sketches of the Nobility, Gentry and Ancient Families, and Notices of Eminent Men, &C. Of the County and City of Waterford; Including the Towns, Parishes, Villages, Manors, and Seats It was something of a feeling of impatience which first suggested the following work, in which an attempt is made to describe, from personal observation, the striking features in the moral and physical condition of an interesting portion of Ireland. To those who are intimately acquainted with this country, the remarks of strangers have something in them eminently provoking. It is a sad thing to be perpetually harassed with the incorrect ideas and false representations of flying travellers and tourists, who, from a few hasty and undigested observations, draw universal and sweeping conclusions, generalizing from insulated facts, and deducing rules from mere exceptions.
