

Letters from an American Farmer: Describing Certain Provincial Situations, Manners, and Customs Not Generally Known; (Classic Reprint)

Our Farmer had long been an eye-witnefs of the transactions which have deformed the face of America. He is one of those who dreaded, and has severely felt, the desolating consequences of a rupture between the parentstate and her colonies: for he has been driven from a situation, the enjoyment of which the reader will find pathetically described in the early letters of this volume. The unhappy contest is, at length, however, drawing toward a period; and it is now only left us to hope, that the obvious interests, and mutual wants, of both countries, may, in due time, and in spite of allo bfacles, happily re-unite them.
