

Transformed by Fulbright: A Scholars Personal Journey in South America

I came to Santiago, Chile as part of the Fulbright Scholars program, and worked during the months of July to December of 2008 as a professor in residence at la Universidad Metropolitana de Ciencia de la Educacion (UMCE). I am currently a university professor in the area of Teacher Education , where I specialize in science education, technology integration and curriculum development. After a year and a half of planning and preparation for our trip to Santiago de Chile, my wife, Sarah and I arrived safe and sound in this wonderful cosmopolitan city. At UMCE, I taught seminars in my focus areas, which include action science, problem-based learning, constructivism, technology use, distance learning and curriculum development. I also conducted a research project here in Santiago with the faculty and students at UMCE in the use of technology in the teaching and learning of science. This will be a forum for my ongoing thoughts - mis pensamientos - that I will put down in order to chronicle my journey for my friends, family and colleagues. As my life will be an immersion into a new culture and completely in Spanish, which is not my native language, I will infuse Spanish words and phrases throughout this text as a method of chronicling my perspectives.

The text will be written in first person, as the content came from journal entries I made throughout my Fulbright experience in Chile. Additionally, there are Spanish words, which will follow various English words in parenthesis. This is done so that the immersive experience in two languages will come through in part, as well as to provide a way of integrating Spanish words and phrases into the text in a readable manner. My hope is that it will also prove interesting and useful for others wanting to go on a Fulbright experience; one which you will come to see that was truly transformational for me, both personally and professionally.
